Three Glenbard East teens are Presidential Scholar candidates

Congratulations to Glenbard East High School students Michael Foley, David Luedtke and Justin Quam, who have been chosen as candidates for the U.S. Presidential Scholars program, which honors some of the country's most distinguished high school seniors.

Up to 141 students are chosen from among outstanding graduating seniors to become Presidential Scholars. All scholars are honored for their accomplishments during the program's national recognition events, which are held in June in Washington, D.C. While in Washington, scholars will meet with government officials, educators, authors, musicians, and scientists.

Most of the scholars are selected on the basis of broad academic achievement. Approximately 20 additional students are selected on the basis of their academic and artistic scholarship in the visual or performing arts or creative writing.

Candidates are evaluated based on their academic achievement, personal characteristics, leadership and service activities, and an analysis of an essay they write.
